Johnston Welcomes New Administrative Assistant

JOHNSTON, Iowa – On Monday, March 30, 2020, the Johnston Community Development and Building Department welcomed Administrative Assistant Kelsey Luczycki.

“Kelsey joins us with a wealth of customer service experience, including municipal government experience, that will complement our existing team,” said Community Development Director David Wilwerding. “In her new role, Kelsey will serve as the first point of contact for most citizens and businesses interacting with the Community Development Department, as well as being responsible many additional duties needed to support the entire department.”

Kelsey understands the importance of serving residents as she was previously employed with the City of Steamboat Springs, CO, as the Parks & Recreation Registration Specialist. She holds a Bachelor’s degree from Iowa State University.

Once City Hall reopens, Kelsey looks forward to meeting the residents of Johnston and working with the talented employees within our community. Kelsey is working and is happy to answer any questions you may have during this pandemic over the phone or via email.
